

Billy Bunters Double

Billy Bunter) is a fictional schoolboy created by Charles Hamilton using the pen name Frank Richards. Billy features in stories set at Greyfriars School which were originally published in the boys weekly story paper The Magnet in England from 1908 to 1940. Subsequently, Bunter appeared in novels, on television, in stage plays, and in comic strips. Bunters defining characteristic is his greediness and dramatically overweight appearance. His character is, in many respects, a highly obnoxious anti-hero. However, in his own mind, he is an exemplary character: handsome, talented and aristocratic; and dismisses most of those around him as beasts. In this book, Billy has gotten himself in lots of trouble with both masters and boys out for his blood. Billy persuades his cousin Wally, an identical look-alike, to change places with him so he can take a vacation at a neighboring seaside resort, and not face up to the trouble. Wally turns out to be everything Billy's not, and the tables are turned. Can Billy live up to the legend Wally portrayed?? The author, Frank Richards, stories have continued to fascinate readers for years, and he has been placed among the classic authors of juvenile fiction, although his books are also much enjoyed by adults.
