Stepfamilies face challenges, tasks, and crises that are unique and different from the conventional life cycle of biological families. Unfortunately such families have been subjected to the norms and expectations based on traditional nuclear families. This study, therefore, examined relationships among psycho-social factors and the quality of the stepchild and stepparent relationships in selected families in two states of Nigeria. The research adopted ex-post-facto design. The multi-stage sampling technique was used in the selection of 400 stepfamilies (with a total of 1000 participants). Three validated and structured questionnaires namely: Stepparent and Stepchild Relationship Quality Questionnaire (SPSCRQQ), Stepparent and Stepchild Relationship Questionnaire (SPSCRQ)- Stepchild Specific; and Stepparent and Stepchild Relationship Questionnaire (SPSCRQ) - Stepparent Specific, were used to collect data for the study. The results indicated that loyalty conflict, relationship with non-residential kin, communication, age of child at the time of remarriage, marital relationship and parenting style were predictors of the quality of the stepparent and stepchild relationship in Nigeria.
