

Homo floresiensis: the hobbits of Flores Island (What Every Human Should Know)

What may have been one of the three or four most important events of the early twenty-first century was the discovery of the extraordinary skeleton of a small, hobbit-like hominin of diminutive stature (1 meter), small brain (380 cm<sup>3</sup>, as compared with the average modern human of ~1500 cm<sup>3</sup>) and large feet in a cave on the Indonesian island of Flores. Radiocarbon dating established that this ... person? ... lived approximately 18,000 years ago. This snack-sized essay from the WHAT EVERY HUMAN SHOULD KNOW series explains what every human should know about the hobbits and why they are so important. Active TOC, 4 greyscale illustrations.
